Do You Have a True Retirement Plan?

Everyone knows that in order to have a successful retirement in today's world, you will have to save enough money and save it properly. However, even the best-laid retirement plans can run into trouble in retirement. Why is that? It is because of many potential threats to your plan.

The goal of retirement planning is to save enough money, based on your specific goals, objectives, and desires, to have a comfortable and secure retirement. Of course, the amount of money needed is different for everyone. In order to reach that specific number or level of assets, you have to have a very solid and adaptable retirement plan. So, when that number or level of assets is reached, is your retirement plan in the clear? Maybe not.

There are several retirement threats that could come into play during your retirement years which could severely affect or even destroy your hard-earned retirement plan and budget very quickly. The reason for this is that many times these threats are not properly planned for or even considered during retirement planning. Thus, a retirement plan is not a true retirement plan until these issues and threats are considered and made part of your retirement planning.

Join me this weekend on The Retirement Money Matters Show as we inform you of many of these threats and about how you can specifically plan for them, so they will not destroy your retirement budget. The show airs Saturday afternoon at 4 on WFRN (93.7 FM), Sunday morning at 8:00 on WWKI (100.5 FM) or anytime online at www.theretirementmoneymattersshow.com.
